MINUTES

Mr Cumming's Tel No. 935 of 30th March reporting Sir O. Franks' conversation with Mr. Dulles on Chinese participation has been repeated to Tokyo. No further action seems necessary

I don't think the idea in para. 1 of this tel. is a very good one.

FJ 1022/446

At a date I can no longer recollect but before I saw your letter of the 8th February to Graves I had a very informal and entirely personal conversation with United States Ambassador in the course of which we discussed the difficulty His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom might feel in signing a Japanese Peace Treaty to which Chinese Nationalist signature was also appended. Among various suggestions I mentioned an idea that had occurred to me viz. that while the treaty should be negotiated between United States and active belligerents, the final instrument should be signed by United States and Japan alone, the remaining Powers adhering to it.

2. I had completely forgotten about the conversation until reminded of it by my United States colleague who has just returned from a stay of three weeks in Washington whither he had been summoned for consultations with Mr. Dulles. He told me that among questions that had been discussed during his stay was the problem of the "two countries" adding (to my alarm) that he had mentioned suggestion referred to in paragraph 1 above and that the State Department were now working on "something along these lines". I very firmly told him, as I had done originally, that my suggestion had been entirely my own and that so far as I know your present line of thinking was considerably different.

3. It would, I think, be useful if when His Majesty's Embassy Washington has officially approached the State Department on the subject of Chinese participation in the Peace Treaty I could be given signal by telegram. In the meantime I am, of course, avoiding the subject.

Foreign Office please pass Washington as my telegram No. 73 Saving.
