Your telegram No. 1700.

Japanese Peace Treaty: Chinese Participation and Disposal of Formosa.

Mr. Dulles raised this question yesterday in course of meeting here with our representatives to discuss procedural questions connected with Treaty (see my Saving No. 393 not to all). Not yet recd

2. He began by asking whether we had yet made any approach to the Peking Government on the subject. He was told that we had not.

FJ1022/36

3. Our representatives then spoke as instructed in your telegram under reference, and emphasised the point about not prejudicing in advance Japan's relations with the mainland of China (please see paragraph 4 of Ottawa telegram No. 365 to C.R.O.). Mr. Dulles made two comments on this: first, that Japan's trade with Formosa is at present of some importance; and secondly that even now she has a good deal of more or less clandestine trade with the Chinese mainland which would presumably continue whatever the relations between Tokyo and Peking. Nevertheless he seemed aware of the force of the case against Nationalist participation. He would wish to sound out congressional opinion on the possibility of a compromise solution, but in the present emotional state of Congress it would be necessary to wait a short time (he said two weeks) before doing this.

3. [sic] He recognized that the Formosa clause is dependent on solution of Chinese participation and said he thought, once that had been achieved, we should have no difficulty in agreeing to a wording.

4. His tone was calm and he showed understanding of our difficulties, though not disposed to minimise his own.

Foreign Office please pass Saving to Tokyo, Singapore and Peking as my telegrams 55, 60 and 22 respectively.
