Truck Rams Bus

10 COEDS KILLED IN CRASH

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N. J. (AP) — A bus taking 41 girls back to Trenton State College after a Broadway play was rammed by a tank truck today. Ten of the students burned to death.

The truck rounded a curve on Rt. 1 here and smashed into the rear of the bus, which had stopped for a traffic light in rain and fog.

The gas tank in the rear of the bus exploded, trapping the girls. The bus driver said they panicked in the holocaust that followed and he had to throw them out the doors.

The flames spread to the cab of the truck, where driver Roscoe Poe, 34, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was hanging out the door pinned by his ankle.

"Don't let me die this way," he screamed at approaching firemen Henry Reilly and Vincent Regan of New Brunswick. The firemen worked with wrenches and crowbars to free Poe, who cried over and over: "Thank God you're here. Oh my God, Thank God you're here. Help me, save me."

Just after Poe was dragged away, the flames reached the huge tank trailer, which held no fuel but was full of fumes. The tank exploded and demolished the truck.

The scene of the fiery crash is opposite the farm of the Rutgers University Agriculture College. North Brunswick is 35 miles southwest of New York City.

The bus driver, Carmen [illegible], 40, of Trenton, said he approached the traffic light at 5 miles an hour just before 1 a.m. When the truck hit, the impact knocked the bus into the next lane, he said. His gas tank blew up at once.

[illegible] said the terrified girls jumped up at the front door. He threw them outside, leaving others out as he could reach them. He worked his way through the flames to the rear emergency door and opened it, just as the truck's cargo tank exploded.

The bus burned for two hours. Poe was taken to a hospital in fair condition from burns. [illegible] suffered burns and shock.

The 10 bodies were taken to a nearby funeral home, burned beyond recognition. Twelve others were hospitalized, four of them admitted in critical condition. Twenty-five were unaccounted for. Some of the students least hurt went back to Trenton.

Officials of Trenton State arrived a few hours after the crash to begin compiling a list of the dead. They said they would have to work mostly by process of elimination.

A total of 40 girls had gone to New York for the evening to see the Archibald MacLeish play "J. B." Two buses headed back for Trenton after the show.

One bus had mechanical trouble on the way and a replacement was sent to New York.

Poe's truck was one of two owned by Paint & Oil Delivery Co. of Long Island City, N.Y. They were headed for Philadelphia to pick up cargoes of fuel oil.

The lead bus made it through a changing light at Rt. 1 and Ryder's Lane. The second bus with [illegible] at the wheel slowed for the red signal in a steady downpour.

Behind Poe's truck was the second truck, driven by William McNeely, of Brooklyn. He told police Poe was doing about 35 miles an hour when he plowed into the bus.

Flames burst from the bus immediately, McNeely said, and one body was blown out. Girls began piling out the front door.

Two faculty members and a few male students went along on the show trip. One of the faculty, Dr. Ernest Stein, a history professor, was seated in the rear of the crash bus with his wife.

Stein was among those unaccounted for.

FOR 2c PLAIN

Give Till It Hurts— And It Does

By HARRY GOLDEN

This is the sixth of a series from HARRY GOLDEN's latest bestseller, "For 2c Plain."

Fund-raising has made extroverts out of thousands of quiet and shy fellows throughout the land. This of course is true at all levels of the American culture — Protestant, Catholic and Jew — except that with the Jew, as usual, it is more so.

Take the fellow who has led a very quiet life. Once the fund-raiser takes him under his wing, this man becomes highly articulate, often a veritable whirlwind at "saying a few words" at committee meetings and banquets.

The first order of business is for the fundraiser and his press assistant to call an initial meeting of the leaders.

What's the potential? How much can be raised?

The next thing on the agenda is whom to get for the big meeting. The ladies meet separately and with them the order of business is reversed: (a) Whom to get for the big meeting? (b) What's the potential?

At both meetings it is suggested that the fundraiser call the national office and see whom they can send.

* * *

Of course the whole thing had been all arranged a month before the fundraiser arrived in town. The instructions are in his pocket: "George Jessel will be in Miami for the big meeting on the 8th. May be a good idea to get him to drop off at Kenilworth on his way to Cleveland where he's due on the 10th."

It is at the third "parlor meeting," this time a joint meeting of the leaders and the ladies, that the fundraiser finally breaks the news. (Breathlessly): "Folks, I just found out something big! I think I can get you — George Jessel. With a $100,000 potential, I think I can swing it with the national office."

Two women jump up, both talking at once: "Don't worry about the potential, grab Jessel, don't worry, we'll do the rest."

One of the leaders, a bit more sophisticated, says quietly, "You better call national and tell them to hold Jessel for us. I think we'll make it all right. Speak to Max Cohen himself."

"A good fellow, Max," repeats the leader.

The fundraiser, who is America's greatest authority on [illegible], does not use the name "Max." With great humility, he says, "I'll call Mr. Cohen right away at his home," and the leader beams as he repeats, "Yes, call Max right away and give him our decision."

"Don't take no for an answer," shouts the wife of the very top leader.

* * *

Now everything is all set for the real tsuris (trouble) to begin.

Eventually an agreement is reached. The entire community will be invited and admission will be by the purchase of one bond, any denomination, even a hundred-dollar one.

The top leader speaks. "I am glad we got this admission-by-the-bond through, because we can now make sure of something I've been arguing about every year — NO SOLICITATIONS AT THE DINNER. Let's enjoy it for once. Let's be dignified. Now that we are asking for admission by bond, I shall insist, no solicitations at the dinner."

They ask the fundraiser to please stand up. "No solicitations at the dinner. Is that agreed?" The fundraiser looks hurt — "I want to shake hands

Macmillan Margin Growing

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservative Party returned to power today for a third term under orders to keep Britain prosperous and the world quiet.

With 398 of the 630 House of Commons seats decided when counting stopped for the night, Conservatives held [illegible], a gain of [illegible]; Laborites [illegible], a loss of [illegible], and Liberals 1, a gain of one.

On this showing the Conservatives would outnumber all other parties by roughly 90 seats when all results are in. In the last Parliament their over-all majority was [illegible]. Some Conservative leaders, and even some Laborites, were talking of a 100-seat majority.

In the popular vote, the Conservatives so far had taken [illegible], or [illegible] per cent. Labor [illegible], or [illegible] per cent, and the Liberals [illegible], or [illegible] per cent.

The popular vote in the last general election, in 1955, went 49.7 per cent for the Conservatives, 46.4 for Labor and 2.7 for the Liberals.

SPURN PROMISES

Thus the British electorate spurned lavish promises of tax cuts and pension increases offered by the socialistic Labor Party.

Instead they plumped for the Conservatives' free enterprise policies, their "peace and plenty" platform, and chose Macmillan rather than Labor's Hugh Gaitskell to talk for Britain at the summit.

The vote gives the Conservatives a mandate to rule for another

Britain's Stocks Go Skyward

LONDON (AP) — The Conservative election victory sent stock prices booming to new record heights on the London Exchange today. Experts said they had never seen such a tidal wave of buying.

Steel shares — rising by as much as 10 shillings ($1.40) — led a massive opening in industrials.

The Labor Party had threatened to nationalize the nation's steel industry if victorious in the election. The share rise was an expression of relief that the industry would go unmolested.

Brokers were waiting on the steps of the stock exchange long before it opened at 9:30 a.m. When it did, dealers were besieged by brokers waiting to buy. Some had to stand on seats to avoid being knocked down.

The dealers were just overwhelmed. They had no time to mark up the prices.

An hour after the market opened there was no letup in the demand for shares of almost all kinds.

"The place has gone crazy," said one market observer.

Leading industrial shares, which usually rise a penny at a time, shot up as much as five shillings (70 cents).

Will Van Doren Show? Question Before Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The big question facing congressional investigators today is whether Charles Van Doren would show up to testify about the allegedly rigged "21" TV quiz show on which he collected $129,000.

The 33-year-old scholar, who now holds a $50,000 a year contract with NBC, was suspended yesterday from further appearances on the network until questions raised by a House subcommittee are resolved.

NO REPLY

NBC announced the action shortly after Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.) announced Van Doren had not replied to an invitation issued Wednesday night to appear before his group.

Harris said early this morning he still had received no word from Van Doren.

The chairman pointedly observed that the subcommittee would wind up today its public inquiry into charges that TV quiz programs were fixed and no further hearings were scheduled.

[illegible] TESTIFY

The subcommittee has heard testimony from former contestants and from insiders that the now-defunct quiz show "21" on which Van Doren won nationwide fame was rigged.

No one has charged that Van Doren knew of the rigging or was coached. Van Doren has denied that he was given questions or answers in advance and has been quoted as standing on that denial under oath before a New York County grand jury which investigated TV quiz shows.

STEMPEL 'TIPPED'

However, Herbert Stempel, 32, who Van Doren defeated as "21" quick champion, told the subcommittee he always was given the answers in advance.

Stempel said he was following orders from co-producer Dan Enright when he lost to Van Doren Dec. 5, 1956 by missing two questions.

The subcommittee has questioned Enright and his aide, Albert Freedman, behind closed doors. It did not make public their testimony. Both were alerted to be on hand for possible further questioning today.

FAME SUDDEN

Van Doren, a member of a famous literary family, moved overnight from obscurity as a Columbia University instructor to a living room celebrity in the winter of 1956. After leaving the program he was signed to a talent contract by NBC.

Until today, he had been a regular daily participant on Dave Garroway's morning TV show "Today." He has retained his job at Columbia University, teaching English classes.

Shot Between Eyes, Man Clings To Life

A [illegible]-year-old Negro clung to life in Jackson Memorial Hospital today after being shot squarely between the eyes.

Condition of the shooting victim, Lawton Richardson of [illegible] Florida Ave., Coconut Grove, was listed as critical.

Preliminary examination indicated the bullet [illegible] through Richardson's skull and lodged in his brain.

NAMES ASSAILANT

Miami Detective M. M. Gonzales said Richardson was shot by another Negro, Joe Henry Marshall, [illegible], in a fight over a woman.

In his report, Gonzales said Richardson was courting a woman fellow-tenant in the Florida Avenue rooming house. Marshall came to call on the same woman, and Richardson went to the front porch and told him to go away.

There was a heated argument which Marshall ended by drawing a .38 caliber pistol and shooting Richardson in the head.

NO CHARGE FILED

Marshall, of [illegible] Day Ave., was jailed without the filing of a charge while police wait to see if Richardson would survive.

The shooting was reported at 10:40 p.m. yesterday, and Richardson apparently was holding his own nearly 12 hours later.

Mob Stones Negro Kids In Arkansas

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Three Negro children seeking admission to the all-white Dollarway School drove away in a shower of stones after presenting their case to the school board last night.

A crowd of about 200 jeering whites gathered outside during the two-hour closed-door hearing, then hurled rocks as the Negro party left. None of the 10 Negroes was injured.

A soft-spoken plea for calm, made by School Board President Lee Parham, possibly averted a more serious incident.

Parham told the unruly crowd that there would be no immediate decision on the Negroes' appeal and added, "anything you might do here tonight would hurt us."

HEARING IS CLOSED

In the Negro party were students Ernestine Gore, 16, James Edward Warfield, 15, and Carlos Smith, 15, their parents, attorney George Howard, and several others. Only the students, parents and Howard were allowed in the room for the hearing, Parham said.

Strike Idleness Tops Since '52

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More working time was lost from strikes in August than in any month since June 1952.

The Labor Department said yesterday the steel strike accounted for [illegible] per cent of the 13 million man-days of idleness recorded in August. About [illegible] walkouts involving [illegible] workers began in the month.

If Fall Comes, Can Spring?

NEW YORK (AP) — Lovely Nature, always mysterious, is putting on a puzzling show today in many parts of the East.

Magnolias are blooming. An Easter lily is budding. Azaleas are flowering.

Also flourishing are hawthorns, berries, mock oranges and forsythias.

All this spring-like behavior is taking place with fall already nearly three weeks old. The cause is a burst of freakish summer weather.

It started during the first 10 days of September, the warmest such period in the 90-year history of the New York Weather Bureau, and has continued during October, with temperatures averaging from eight to 10 degrees above normal.

One of the erratic magnolias is on the Westchester County property of Mrs. Mary Greenier.

THIRD TIME

It bloomed the first time in the spring, again the first week in August. Two weeks ago, it bloomed for the third time.

"Some of the buds are showing some white again now," Mrs. Greenier said, "and it looks like it might even bloom a fourth time. It normally has bloomed only once."

Many magnolias are blooming now throughout the East, said T. H. Everett, assistant director for horticulture at the New York Botanical Garden.

"A lot of people are calling and writing to us," Everett said. "Many of them want to know what the trouble is. Some of it happens every year. But it's far more common this year because of the long spell of hot weather."

A mass of cold air that originated over the Rocky Mountains two days ago and spread snow and sleet in its wake, moved into the Midwest early today.

Ahead of the cold air, thunderstorms and heavy rains struck sections from the lower Great Lakes and northern Appalachians southward through the central and south Atlantic states. Rain also fell over most of the far Northwest.

Snow and freezing temperatures were reported in Minnesota, Wisconsin and upper Michigan. Temperatures dipped into the 30s as far south as Arkansas.

HEAVY RAINS

Some of the heavier rainfalls included: Baltimore, [illegible] inches; Gladwin, Mich., [illegible] inches; Missoula, Mont., [illegible] inches.

The Weather Bureau said the cool air would approach the East Coast tonight, lowering temperatures in an area from the Great Lakes southward to the western Gulf Coast.

Rain and thunderstorms were forecast along the East Coast from New England to Florida; rain and some snow will fall from the Dakotas into the Pacific Northwest.

Late yesterday, a tornado hit McHenry, Ill., some 45 miles northwest of downtown Chicago. Forty homes were damaged, trees uprooted and communications disrupted. One person was injured.

State Department spokesman Joseph W. Reap said last night that Hsu was told "this case involved interpretation of a domestic statute and in no way affected our policy with respect to China.
