The Honorable W. H. Seward,
Secretary of State,
Washington, D.C.

Sir,

I have the honor to bring to your notice [Art 576 Consular Manual] that on the 26th of March 1867, and with a view to rescue such of the survivors of the American bark "Rover," wrecked near the southern coast of Formosa on the 12th of March last, that might be left in the hands of the Aborigines. Commander Broad of H. B. M.s sloop of war "Cormorant" having the only known survivor of the crew on board, [a Chinaman]. Started for the scene of this painful occurrence.

on the beach, but attempting to land, was fired on from the jungle, which was so dense that it # would have been folly to attempt to penetrate it, and the boats returned to the ship. A few shells drove the Aborigines from the cover of the jungle to # the higher and more open ground beyond; but # nothing further was attempted, the force that # Commander Broad had at his command being quite inadequate to the task. In this attempt Alfred Flagg A.B. standing by the side of Commander Broad, was wounded by a spent slug in the abdomen.

Amoy 29th April 1867

Sir

I have much pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of your very handsome appreciation of my services on behalf of the crew of the late American bark Rover who had unfortunately fallen into the hands of some savage tribes on the Island of Formosa on the 12th March last

While deeply sensible of the high encomiums which you have been pleased to express towards myself and those who acted with me on that occasion I can only say that I was actuated with but one idea that of saving life and I deeply regret my efforts in this case were so unsuccessful.

You were kind enough to request the names "of those who especially distinguished themselves on that occasion" I therefore forward you herewith a list of those who were employed in the boats of H.M. Sloop on that service one and all having been equally exposed to the same deadly and murderous attack from the savages

I am dear Sir
Yours very respectfully
Signed George D Broad.
Commander

General Le Gendre.
