Addressed to Foreign Office telegram No. (1921 of 21st June.
Repeated for information Saving to Tokyo.

My telegram No. 1883 and Johnston's letter of June 16th. Japanese Peace Treaty.

Dulles asked us to call this morning and showed us telegram he was about to despatch to United States Embassy London embodying completely rewritten version of memorandum contained in your telegram No. 2550. United States Embassy will no doubt be approaching you about this in course of tomorrow.

2. Our only comment was on question of publication. Dulles now envisages publication two days after text has been communicated to principal parties. His arguments in favour of this were

(A) Text would certainly be leaked by one or other of the principal parties (probably the Filipinos).

(B) Minor belligerents were receiving better treatment than they did in the case of Italian Treaty.

We said there was a difference between leakage and an official release. Minor belligerents would have ground for complaint if a document on which we intended later to invite their views reached them first through the press as the result of an official release.

3. Dulles asked if we had any particular Governments in mind who might regard such early publication as discourteous. We mentioned Greece, Norway, and Denmark, all of whom lost merchant shipping in the war against Japan, as possibilities. Dulles suggested one solution might be to give an informal advance indication of the contents of the draft treaty to any of the minor belligerents who appeared to be in a special position. We gather that the Americans are doing this with Mexico and Brazil.

Foreign Office please pass Saving to Tokyo as my telegram No 82.

Japanese Peace Treaty.

United States Embassy ~~now~~ inform us that Mr. Dulles hopes that it may be possible to be in a position to begin the circulation of the draft Treaty in Washington on the morning of July 3rd. ~~They have given us a number of detailed amendments to the draft which are being studied urgently here.~~ We have told ~~the U.S. Embassy~~ them that we hope to be able to let them know ~~xxxx~~ on Monday whether we shall be ready with our answers in time for circulation to begin as proposed.

on detailed amendments now suggested by them

2. I consider that most appropriate means of associating H.M.G. with approach to representatives of principal parties in Washington as agreed, will be for you, or H.M. Ambassador after his return, to be present when Mr. Dulles makes his communication to the Ambassadors concerned, providing that, in the case of your Commonwealth colleagues, this procedure would not cause any embarrassment.

3. As communication to Soviet representative must take special form of reply to Soviet Government's note, addressed to the U.S. Government only, /
