IMMEDIATE

CONFIDENTIAL

Addressed to Foreign Office telegram No. 1795 of 18th December, Repeated for information to Washington.

Your telegram No. 1436. FJ 10310/38

Dulles and the Senators dined with me last night in a purely Anglo-American party which went well. I seized an opportunity to tell Dulles that I had now heard from you and that you were taking the matter up in Washington. I also said you had not changed your views and that any definition such as he has suggested about Chiang-Kai-Shek's Government, would in our view, amount to recognition of that Government as the Government of China.

2. Dulles said that in the circumstances he would not do any more here though he had hoped we might have worked out something together on the spot. He added that he had been reproved by the State Department for talking about divided sovereignty as they regarded this as giving away the American position. I said I did not think we would take advantage of that, and on this note we parted.

3. The Senators did not raise the subject of Japan at all, but I had some talk with Senator Smith about China, of which the effects may not last. In his after dinner speech Dulles made a plea for Anglo-American cooperation and, citing the Japanese Treaty, said that where we agreed we succeeded and where we disagreed we failed.

Foreign Office please pass to Washington as my telegram No. 112.

[Repeated to Washington].
