1 2 cms The National Archives Ins 1 2
Ref: FO 371 110242 209424
Please note that this copy is supplied subject to the National Archives' terms and conditions and that your use of it may be subject to copyright restrictions. Further information is given in the enclosed 'Terms and Conditions of supply of Public Records' leaflet practical matter, increase the possibility of peaceful rather than violent adjustment of the other problems of the area, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter.

4. Invitation to Peking

We expect an invitation will be issued to the Central People's Government in Peking to attend the meeting of the Security Council. We would support such an invitation.

5. Action in Security Council

The New Zealand Government have asked for an early meeting of the Council and arrangements for this are now being discussed with the President. No doubt adequate time will be given before the meeting is called to enable the Governments concerned to consider all aspects of the question.

6. United States Defence Treaty with the Nationalist Chinese

With reference to the connexion between the New Zealand initiative in the Security Council and the recently concluded Defence Treaty, United Kingdom spokesman could say that there was no intrinsic relation between the two. The Treaty was of a purely defensive character, designed to discourage any attack on certain specified territories at present controlled by the Chinese Nationalists by letting would-be attackers know in advance where the United States stood in regard to their defence. The New Zealand initiative on the other hand was concerned with quite a different area where armed clashes had already occurred. Its object was a simple one, namely, without allocating blame to either side for the past or prejudging their claims for the future, to put an end to the fighting and ensure that it did not recur. Any injunction to cease hostilities would apply without discrimination equally to either party.